New Orleans, LA. (October 17, 2007) – In September 2007, the population of New Orleans reached 70 percent of pre-Katrina levels, up from 49.5 percent in August 2006. The rate of increase was lower in September than in previous months. In September, 1,601 more residences started receiving mail in Orleans Parish, compared to a monthly average of 3,250 newly active residences from August 2006 through August 2007.

“Most families probably worked to get home before the school year started. We expected to see a smaller increase in September,” said Allison Plyer, Deputy Director of the Greater New Orleans Community Data Center. “We can expect to see larger increases in the future. There is still a lot of federal funding in the pipeline for housing repairs.”

On September 25, 2007, data from the US Postal Service was presented before the Senate Committee on Banking, Housing and Urban Affairs as the most reliable indicator we have of the repopulation of New Orleans and the surrounding metropolitan area.

The number of households actively receiving mail in the 6-parish metropolitan area reached 86 percent of pre-Katrina levels in September of 2007.
